DETROIT CITY COUNCIL APPROVES GREEKTOWN CASINO SETTLEMENT

Yesterday, The Detroit City Council voted 6-3 in favor of a settlement with Greektown Casino that, according to Charles Moore, the casino's lead restructuring advisor with Conway MacKenzie, resolves all open disputes between the city and the casino over development agreement and tax issues.

According to The Detroit News, the settlement includes an immediate payout to the city of Detroit of $3.5 million for legal fees and an additional $9.6 million upon the casino's exit from bankruptcy.

SINGLE EVENT SPORTS BETTING TO BE CONSIDERED IN CANADA

According to a recent report from CBC News, a Canadian federal politician has reintroduced the possibility for modified sports betting rules in Ontario, Canada. If passed, new modifications would allow for single-event sports betting to be offered at Casino Windsor, located in Windsor, Ontario, Canada.

Joe Comartin, New Democrat Party Member of Parliament for Windsor-Techumseh, told CBC News that he believes single-event sports betting would be a 'tool' to draw Americans to Canada. Comartin is currently working with the Canadian Gaming Association and the CAW Local 444, which represents 2,800 Caesars Windsor workers, to change the criminal code to allow this type of betting.

Although Comartin is not the first politician to approach the government asking for a change to the criminal code to allow this type of betting, he is the first Federal Member of Parliament to address the issue.

Rick Laporte, president of CAW Local 444, told CBC News last Friday, “[w]e think that might be the edge that we may need to remain competitive with the other Detroit and Ohio casinos in the future.”

Under Canadian law, persons can currently bet on sports using the government run Proline, however it only allows players to place parlay bets, which require three bets on at least two separate sporting events. Nevada is currently the only jurisdiction in North America that offers single-event sports betting.

“The Americans would certainly come to Windsor just for the sports betting, and then hopefully they’ll bring other people with them,” Comartin told CBC News.

OHIO LAWMAKERS APPROVE STATEWIDE BALLOT INITIATIVE TO CHANGE CASINO LOCATION

Issue 3 was passed last November with a 53 percent Ohio voter approval, thus allowing four casinos to be built in the state of Ohio. Since voter approval, opposition has come from the city of Columbus. Recently, those in opposition have persuaded Ohio lawmakers to approve a plan to allow Penn National Gaming, Inc. to change the location of its proposed Columbus casino.

The new plan will be placed on the May, 2010 primary ballot for voters to decide whether to amend restrictions on the recently passed Issue 3. The new amendment would change the planned Columbus casino location from the downtown Arena District to a former GM auto plant approximately eight miles west of the downtown area.

State Rep. Kevin Bacon (R) told Cleveland Live, “[t]he Arena District, when it was designed, was for family-friendly entertainment. It was never designed to have a casino.”

The May, 2010 ballot proposal will only affect the location of the Columbus casino. It will not affect casino plans in Cleveland, Cincinnati or Toledo.

“Everyone understands that gambling is coming to Ohio. We aren’t trying to stop that,” Rep. Bacon said. “We’re just asking for help from everyone in Ohio now that we have reached this compromise.”

The relocation of the Columbus casino now goes before all voters across the state of Ohio.
